Practice Profile

Craig is an approachable and experienced Barrister with extensive knowledge and experience within Family Law.

Craig's emphasis is always on 'the client' and he excels at making clients feel at ease and comfortable in the often unfamiliar environment of the court.

Craig's understanding approach is based on firm experience of the legal system. He served with the Wiltshire Police for 14 years as a Detective Sergeant and was integrally involved with cases within the family and criminal justice system. This included joint investigations, child abuse, serious domestic abuse and rape cases. His experience in this area is especially useful in cross-examination and 'finding of fact' situations.

This experience has equipped Craig with the skills and understanding to interpret each client's unique position alongside Family Law, both public and private. Craig regularly represents local authorities, police authorities, guardians, parents and grand parents and is comfortable in all Courts including.

Craig has specialist experience of Legal Professional Privilege and regularly works with Police Authorities, specialist units and other parties in this capacity. Craig worked as an Investigative Lawyer at the Serious Fraud Office and was involved in several high profile cases.
