

Ingrid Kinder studied Law at Durham University, graduating with First Class Honours, before completing the Bar Practice Course at the University of Law, where she achieved a High Distinction and was awarded an Advocacy Scholarship. She has gained experience across a range of legal settings, including family law mini-pupillages, and most recently worked as a Regulatory Assistant at the Bar Standards Board. Ingrid has a particular interest in matrimonial finance, private children work and modern families, including surrogacy and reproductive law.
