

Mavis Amonoo-Acquah

Call: 2013

Mavis' practice encompasses all areas of Family Law – in particular Private children, International children, Surrogacy/modern families, and Public children. Mavis' practice includes a significant amount of High Court work and she has appeared in the Court of Appeal as a junior to leading Silks.

As an advocate, Mavis is tenacious, persuasive and maintains an authoritative presence in the courtroom. The air of calm Mavis conveys in court, and the rapport she quickly establishes with each client, always helps to put her clients at ease – even during the most emotionally charged cases.

Her meticulous preparation coupled with her robust written and oral advocacy, regularly achieves positive outcomes. With each case, Mavis seeks to provide considered and realistic advice as early as possible within proceedings, to ensure the strongest possible position can be advanced for every client.

Mavis is often invited to present training or attend as a speaker at Surrogacy Law seminars or conferences, thus making her an increasingly recognised practitioner in this area of law. Mavis also regularly gives legal talks on topics within in her other practice areas, and has been commissioned to write case analyses for Lexis PSL on leading judgments.

Prior to her career at the Bar, Mavis assisted with UNICEF and UN-commissioned research projects on International Children Law at the Coram Children's Legal Centre. In addition, her experience as an advocate began with successfully conducting cases as a volunteer advocate with the Free Representation Unit, School Exclusions Project and Philadelphia Employment Advocacy Project.

Mavis is passionate about widening access to the legal profession and is regularly invited to speak in schools and at careers conferences as part of social mobility programmes.

Private Law Children

Mavis has considerable experience in Private Law work including applications for Child Arrangement Orders, Prohibited Steps Orders, Special Guardianship Orders and Specific Issue Orders. Her work in this area often involves highly contentious disputes where issues of parental alienation, significant harm and allegations of domestic abuse arise. Mavis has also acted in proceedings dealing with both international and internal relocation.

International Children Law

Mavis is regularly instructed in international children law proceedings before the Family Division of the High Court. Mavis' wide experience in this area includes Hague and non-Hague abduction proceedings, international relocation, proceedings involving stranded spouses, the recognition and enforcement of orders, wardship and jurisdictional disputes, female genital mutilation and forced marriage.

Surrogacy & Modern Families

As a Pegasus Scholar, Mavis undertook a period of secondment working for Vorzimer Masserman – a leading Fertility Law Firm in Los Angeles, where she advised the firm's UK clients on issues pertaining to UK Surrogacy Law and obtaining Parental Orders. She thus has a thorough working knowledge of both UK Surrogacy Law and Californian Surrogacy Law.

Mavis has a particular interest in modern family arrangements and Fertility Law. She has experience of cases involving residence disputes arising from informal surrogacy arrangements, applications seeking declarations of parentage following fertility treatment, and obtaining parental orders after both internal and international surrogacy arrangements.

Mavis is able to provide advice to both solicitors and direct access clients at different stages of the surrogacy arrangement and court process. Alongside this, Mavis is often invited to present training or attend as a speaker at Surrogacy Law seminars or conferences, thus making her an increasingly recognised practitioner in this area of law.

Mavis has a keen interest in Surrogacy Law reform; she has published two articles on this subject matter, spoken at conferences and co-drafted the Bar Council's response to the Law Commission's 2019 Consultation Paper.

Mavis appeared in the leading case of Re C, the first case to consider the implications of s54(6) HFEA 2008.
