Appeal by child against return order, raising issue as to role of a "solicitor-guardian" in 1980 Convention proceedings.
- A Mother v A Father & Ors [2023] EWHC 2059 (Fam)
Rob George represent two children in this re-hearing of a 1980 Hague Convention case. The parents originally agreed to the separation of the children, with one remaining and the other returning under the Convention. The children objected to this proposal and the court set aside that order. At the re-hearing, Rob successfully established exceptions to allow both children to remain in this country, including child's objections and a grave risk of harm in relation to sibling separation. The case shows the importance of listening to children and the potential role of children themselves in Hague Convention proceedings.
- A (A Child) (Habitual Residence : 1996 Hague Child Protection Convention) (Rev1) [2023] EWCA Civ 659
Successfully appealed a decision of the High Court concerning the jurisdiction of the courts in relation to a child wrongfully retained in Zambia. The case provides important clarification about habitual residence and the need to avoid over-simplification of the test, while also making clear for the purposes of the Family Law Act 1986 that it is the substance of the orders sought, not the form of the application, that matters. The case has been remitted for rehearing on the issue of habitual residence at the date of the application.

Public Law Children

Notable Public Law Children cases

- Re H (Step-Parent Adoption: Human Rights) [2023] EWHC 3186 (Fam)

Rob acting pro bono represented the applicant step-father.

The law on step-parent adoption has been changed by this ground-breaking judgement from the President of the Family Division.

Rob successfully argued that the court should use the Human Rights Act 1998 to modify provisions of the Adoption and Children Act 2002, to allow a step-parent adoption to be made in a case where the child's natural parent had died before the application was made.

The President accepted Rob's argument and s51(2) of the Act has been amended accordingly.

- Article 39 v Secretary of State for the Home Department [2023] EWHC 1398 (Fam)

Rob George was one of three counsel representing children's rights charity Article 39 in this ground-breaking case about the scope of wardship and the inherent jurisdiction. The case concerned a number of 'missing' unaccompanied asylum-seeking (UAS) children, who disappeared from Home Office-run hotel accommodation.

While the court ultimately declined to use its wardship jurisdiction, the case shows that a charity can make such an application, and brought into the open a large amount of previously unknown information about the Home Office's involvement with these cases and the responsibilities of local authorities in safeguarding UAS children.

- Re T [2021] UKSC 35

Supreme Court appeal about the use of the inherent jurisdiction to authorise secure accommodation for vulnerable children.

- A County Council v M [2021] EWFC 35

Order of Judd J authorising a local authority to proceed with an adoption favoured by the parents without first _____ assessing the paternal grandmother as a potential carer.
